

ISIS Imagery Brief: North Korean Site After Nuclear Test

David Albright and Paul Brannan

October 17, 2006

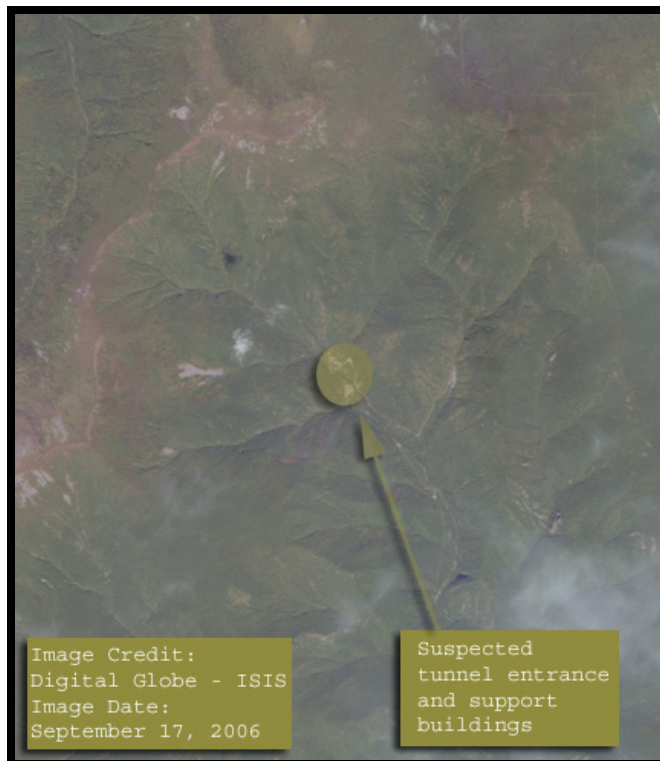

The Institute for Science and International Security (ISIS)

ISIS has obtained commercial satellite imagery from Digital Globe of the suspected North Korean nuclear test site collected on October 13, 2006—four days after the test. The set of images below depict the suspected tunnel entrance and support buildings before and after the test.

Overview of suspected North Korean nuclear test site collected after the test

Overview of suspected North Korean nuclear test site collected before the test